Chromium Plating.

It is not claimed that chromium plated parts are non-rusting. Chromium is merely a non-tarnishable protective covering for the nickel plating upon which it is deposited, and when dirty may be cleaned with ordinary soap and water.

Its use, while reducing the upkeep labour expended upon machines, does not relieve the user of the responsibility of taking the usual precautions to prevent the rusting of parts subjected to the weather.

We cannot undertake the chromium plating of any components other than those fitted to certain of our 1930 models.
